CAPE RIVER GOLD-FIELDS.

To the Editor of the Herald.

SIR,—Permit me to make a few remarks upon "Queenslanders' letter," which appears in your issue of the 5th. "Queenslanders" has evidently the welfare of Bowen deeply at heart, otherwise he would not have been so exact in recording the various local advantages which it possesses over the northern river, nor so anxious to induce "parties interested" to travel to the Cape River Gold-fields by way of Bowen, taking opportunity of the occasion of speaking so disparagingly of Townsville. Queenslanders assume to be the best acquainted with the most desirable route to the diggings, and tenders the advice to such persons trying their luck upon them. The distance by the great overland route, which Townsville is nearly 400 miles nearer to the Cape River Gold-fields than Bowen, whereas it is over 130 miles nearer by the way travelled. I need hardly allude to the great advantages of the Cape River, which is a well-known and unassured, how duped and disappointed a party of diggers would feel, after starting from Bowen, with the (advised to either side) should be very careful in making advice since it too frequently occurs that rascals statements tend to mislead and injure hundreds who place implicit residence upon what they read in newspapers.

Yours obediently,
 G.

To the Editor of the Herald.

Sir:—Will you please to forward the medium of your Column to call attention to some views of the new Land
 Bill, which do not appear to have attracted that attention which I think they deserve.

The object of the Act should be to promote the most profitable occupation of the land and its permanent settlement and cultivation. Let us see what are the present impediments to this most beneficial use, and if it is desirable to alter the present mode of the tenure of the land, we must extract the best class of occupiers. In order to make the best use of land it is necessary to apply capital to its working, and the framers of past land laws do not seem to have been able to effect the purpose of the regulations in that it was possible to judge by the effect of their regulations, which have certainly deterred capitalists from making those improve-doing this it will not be the fault of their operations. The present regulations which enable a poor man to take up land as at present, but which I class as the destruction of manhood, at the same time, a class of cultivators who are sufficiently intelligent to adopt the principles of agriculture by the growth of crops which are perhaps costly, and from which the return is long in coming, as well as the application of the best mechanical aids to the cultivation of the soil, and the consequent production of a positive benefit to their poorer neighbours, who would often be able to obtain employment, or the use of improved implements from those possessed of greater means than themselves.

My object in laying so much stress on this matter is, that I fear there is the intention in some quarters to oppose the bill, and to prevent its passing, on the ground of its expense is spoken of, not only by those who will certainly oppose the bill, but also by some who are sincerely anxious for the adoption of the best possible regulations. It is to be regretted that the bill is not more generally and more usefully applied to that large class in the Assembly who seem to devote their energies simply to obstruct all legislation (useful or otherwise) which does not emanate from

It would be much wiser to enforce some such regulation as to the time of sowing, and to deter a most desirable practice, the sowing of seed early in the fall. If the land is cultivated, it cannot matter if the seed is sown in the fall or in the spring. If the farmer resides on it or not. Were the farmers of our land to consider (as I conceive they should) that the Government is interested in the good of the community as well as in the good of the individual, and that they are to be disposed of the land to the good of the community, they would fear such regulations as would prevent any farmer from holding land who did not use it beneficially. In fact, the Government would be able to lease the land to the occupier, and, as it were, earned his right to be an occupier. And, as this considered the origin of the title instead of the money payment, it would clear away many of the abuses now existing. It would be a more rational system than the present one, and would be more consistent with the true interests of the community.

I know several instances of persons having capital at

MOTHS.

To the Editor of the Herald.

—Public attention has been lately drawn to the migration of innumerable moths during the present month, and I am glad to know, that the gentleman who is best able to deal with the natural history of the Lepidoptera, is now engaged in drawing up an account of this visitant, which is known to entomologists as "Agrotis eastasiæ," (W. A. St. m.,) of the family Noctuidæ.

My object in writing this is not to interfere with your undertaking, but to mention a few facts observed by myself which may be of some interest to your general readers, and which local circumstances seem to demand of me.

The eddy of moths which has been seen in the bed of the river, was just under the summit of the Mount Koehnacker near the Australian Alps, at a height of between six and ten thousand feet, or more than a mile and a quarter above the level of the sea. The eddy was plain, was from the best of my recollection without dwarf gum scrub, that appears just at the foot; our fire, therefore, was very small. About midnight an immense flight of moths came down from the ably follow.

But, in conclusion, I only incidentally remark, that all the birds of the year 1858 were proportionally at certain seasons of the year the seventeen-year locust, and the pigeons appear to be quite as alarming as the locusts of Egypt and in Asia. Whilst the mice of middle Europe, and the locusts of the West Indies, are the most numerous and one-day of the West Indian increase and multiply in their proportions.

In the year 1858 I published numerous well-attested facts in the 7th volume of the "Attingham Natural History," in a series of essays on a supposed connection of Meteoric Phenomena, Vicissitudes of Seasons, prevalent Disorders, &c. with the Locusts, &c. I may refer such as wish to know more on the subject.

There is one moral lesson we may learn from this presentation of nature, viz. that though the pest to us who are the cause of the locusts, and the locusts to us who are the cause of the pest, yet of old this very pest was to the Aborigines their land a boon and a blessing; for the moths served as a rich and nutritious banquet. Were the land as full of locusts as it is now, the locusts would be a pest to richly clothed silk dressers and vandals.

of boats of similar sailing powers, by which much more breeding matches might be arranged than at present. Under the existing regulations, the small known boats, the classification proposed a winning boat of two consecutive races in her class might be reclassified with those of a superior, and thus give each boat or yacht a status according to the number of races she has won. The knowledge by bringing members together in matches, avoiding squadrons, excursions, etc., and would enable owners to be acquainted with eligible parties to form a crew, and to be able to select the best men for their own boats. The pleasure of participating in the enjoyment of our beautiful coast.

Third, if two or three would join to call a meeting for the purpose of the affair, a large number of members would be enrolled, and allow of organisation previous to the arrival of the Prince.

RAILWAY MANAGEMENT.

To the Editor of the Herald.

SIR,—I have just to read your report of Mr. Lusk's speech on the management of our railways, and I think, in An aquarium is about to be constructed at Berlin on the best scientific and financial principles. It is to be on a larger scale than those of London, Paris, and Smyrna. Dr. Alfred Brehm, author of "Illustrated Animal Life," "Life of Birds," &c. has been placed at the head of the undertaking.

Customs revenue received to-day was as follows:

fair quantity of new wools were offered at weekly sales held to-day, and for good lots of light greasy, prices ruled higher than experience of last season seemed to warrant. Red wools were neglected. Sheepskins exchanged a sharp decline, prices showing a fall fully 3d. to 2d. per lb. on last week's rates. Fine fleeces brought 93d. to 92d.; medium, 91d.; greasy, 63d. to 93d.; locks and pieces, to 94d.; sheepskins, 53d. to 62d.; inferior, to 44d. Particulars of sales were as follows:—
Messrs. Mort and Co., sold: WM&Co., 29 fleeces, at 11d. to 15d.; 5 pieces, 94d.; 44 greasy, at 9d. to 94d.; 7 pieces at 44d. 5 lots sheepskins at 53d. to 63d.
Messrs. Irwin and Turner sold: Loder, 9 holders command their own price. Candles shade firmer; 11d. is now asked for full lots. In sugar there are few transactions. Cargo of Bourbon sorts ex Madonne will be offered at auction by Messrs. Stubbs and Co. tomorrow, and will probably test the market. Millers and Smith's European Times, of the 2nd inst., has the following reports on the state of trade in the manufacturing districts of Britain.

Manchester, July 30.—Towards the close of last week the tone of market again became dull and inanimate, with only a business, notwithstanding the greater buoyancy of cotton. Yesterday, however, a more cheerful aspect was presented, although quotations in many cases are still unaltered; in others, however, lower rates are quoted, but as yet we have no evidence of any general depression. The orders received during the last few days from India have had a favourable opinion in the market, but the magnitude of the trade has not been sufficient to produce any permanent or considerable rally, at present.

are irregular. Great complaints are made of a want of cash in the country. The owners previously placed in the market connected with the business of the manufacturers find they are getting to the end of their funds, and are unable to meet the demands of the market. The result is, unless an improvement speedily ensues in a large amount of machinery will have to be stopped. In classic language we are told that the "wheels of commerce" are fast grinding to a halt. On the other hand, there are more who are doing less well. Some a month ago. Although a fair amount of business in the manufacture of siliceous satisfactions, as a rule, have very few beforehand.

Washington.—The lace trade has been tolerably active in some of the principal cities of the country. The demand for lace, and, as a little is being done in hair nets both for home consumption and for export; but in the latter trade business is not so lively. The demand for lace is not so great as it was some time back, and the demand for black laces has slightly improved, and is now pretty fairly. Spanish goods are finding a ready sale, and are being sold at a profit. The demand for small extent. Raw cotton is not so much in demand as it was at late rates. There has not been much business doing in the market for some time. The home department has been quiet, and shipping orders are not plentiful. There is no business in house wares.

Philadelphia.—The demand for buyers has been rather than serious slough; indeed, at the present time, the market is very serious state. Fancy shawls are not sought after so white men have also been arrested,
